LOYOLA WARRIORS MEET NHL OLDTIMERS JANUARY 22

Loyola's hockey Warriors currently leading the rest of the pack in the Ottawa St. Lawrence Athletic Association, will get a chance to prove their mettle next Monday evening when they meet some of the finest hockey players ever to come out of Montreal.

Coach Dave Draper's Warriors have a charity game schedule for the Loyola Athletic Complex with the Montreal NHL Oldtimers, January 22 at eight P.M. And though the Oldtimers may have lost some of their legs, most have retained their shots and puck sense.

The game, which was arranged by Loyola's veteran right winger Danny Heffernan, son of Gerry Heffernan will be played for the benefit of St. Patrick's Orphanage. Tickets are on sale at most sporting goods stores in the West End of Montreal. They're going for one dollar.

Hockey fans will be able to see all of Canadiens former stars for one third the price they would have to pay at the Forum the following Friday. Familiar names that will be appearing in Oldtimers uniforms include Jacques Plante, Maurice Richard, Elmer Lach, Toe Blake, Ken Reardon, Pete Morin and Buddy O'Connor.

Two interesting sidelights of the game will be the appearances of former Warriors Coach Floyd Curry and the competition between father and son when Gerry Heffernan of the Oldtimers meets Danny Heffernan of the Warriors.

Curry has already warned his former charges "to keep their heads up on the 22nd".

In addition the game will be refereed by "Red" Storey.
